John Parker
KIRKPATRICK.

V.C.

For conspicuous courage and devotion to duty on the 15th September, 1916. A number of men of the 4th C.M.R. Battalion, which had moved to attack the enemy trenches in front of the trenches held by his company, were wounded, acting entirely on his own ~~initiative~~ initiative, he went forward under heavy enemy machine gun fire, and succeeded three times in bringing in wounded men. He went out again for the fourth time, but was killed while bringing a wounded man in.

He did consistent good work in the line, and was always ready for any emergency, never sparing himself, and inspiring the men by his splendid example.

Norman LOWTHER.

D.C.M.

For conspicuous courage and devotion to duty, ~~on~~ on 16th September, 1916. Orders were received to thin out the trench then held by his company, owing to heavy shell fire. This was done and he was left in charge of the men remaining in the trench. Although twice wounded in the performance of this duty, he retained command for 24 hours until relieved. This splendid example of courage greatly inspired and cheered the men in his charge.

David CRAIG.

D.C.M.

For conspicuous courage and devotion to duty, in that he on 15th September, 1916, while acting as wireman to the Bombing Section, although wounded in the assault by his Company on the enemy trench, dressed his own wound and continued in the performance of his duty, although twice ordered out of the trench, refused to go, until same had been blocked and wired.
